JEFFERSON CITY, MISSOURI

Subscription, $1.00 Per Year.

F. G. FULKERSON, Business Manager

Thursday, July 17, 1890.

The spirit that always wins is that which knows no such word as fail.

Railroads are needed. Railroads we must have, railroads we will have.

Nothing less than a railroad connecting this city with the Frisco will satisfy the people.

Now pass the tariff bill and the country will say well done, good and faithful servants.

The passage of the new silver coinage bill will give us annually $30,000,000 more money than heretofore.

The friends of P. M. Musick of Decatur, Cole county, are urging that gentleman to enter the race for probate judge.

LEBANON and Jefferson City can parallel this line to Bagnell and force him to build, or Jefferson City can build to Hancock.

Mr. Gould has left the Lebanon branch in the forests of Miller, and he will leave it there until he sees that we will not stand it.

The new pension legislation will give back $30,000,000 to the people, where it will do the most good. The men in the republican party have great heads.

And so the thing is to be perpetuated is it? "Mr. Stark is pledged to Vest and Cockrell." Cole county is in honor bound to help dissolve this union and brotherhood.

Every republican in Cole county should be made to understand that he is a committee of one to help defeat the candidate for the legislature who has pledged his vote for Vest.

Every man, woman and child that has any interest in the future of Jefferson City must interest themselves in the railroad southward. This line can be built, must be built, and will be built if we display the proper interest and spirit.

Is our last issue anger prompted us to use a few harsh, unkind words which we regretted as soon as uttered. Our long, continued, personal friendship and esteem for the gentleman should have been guarantee against anything of the kind, and hope it will be in the future.

The republican candidate for governor of Pennsylvania is being strongly opposed within the party. The men that compose the republican party are so unlike the Democrats in their allegiance to party that it is always dangerous to impose boss rule on them. Mr. Quay is responsible for Delamater's nomination, and as he forced it upon the party against the strongest protest, there seems to be considerable danger ahead.

The largest convention ever held by the republican party will be held in Jefferson City Aug. 28, 1890. All arrangements for the best care and accommodation will be made. Mr. Ashley W. Ewing, commissioner of the permanent seat of government, notified J. C. Fisher, Esq., that he would personally look after things at the capital and have seats for 1,200 people in the hall of the house of representatives.

The Jefferson City republicans will furnish everything and give the party a rousing reception. We want to make it a grand success. Jefferson City is the city of conventions, and in the future should get them all. In this world it takes work to get anything, and united effort hardly ever fails.

Has there been a time since the birth of the republican party, that the democracy has openly and fairly presented a scheme of affirmative policy, and if so has such scheme ever been sustained by the American people?

C. G. There has not, in either particular, been any such instance. The tariff, emancipation, the creation of the national banking system, the post-bellum amendments to the constitution, the resumption of specie payments and all other great schemes of national policy which have been sanctioned by the people and have become part of our history have been, both in conception and execution, the work of the republican party. The nearest, during the existence of the republican organization, which the democracy came to openly and honestly presenting any national project was between 1855 and 1861, when its dominant section favored the extension of slavery into the territories, and in 1888, when it advocated, in a feeble and half-hearted way, the placing of the tariff duties on a revenue basis. In both of these schemes, as history has shown, the democracy was summarily and vigorously rebuked.

The above query was sent to the G. D., and answered in its last Sunday's addition. We reproduce it for the benefit of the young men, that they may see the historical position occupied by the democratic party. A party of office-seekers without principal or policy, such as this party is shown to be, is unworthy of the support of the promising young men of this country.

The democrats pretend that Bland is a man of influence and ability, and yet he could not even secure $50,000 for one lock and dam in the Osage river. The people of the Osage Valley prefer a man of less national importance, as Bland considers himself too big to pay any attention to the demands of his constituency. He has represented the rich silver owner for 16 years, and our people would like to have a congressman who would devote a few minutes to their interests.

THE TWO PARTIES.

That the republican party is the party of the people, that it is the party of principles, the party of convictions, the party of progress and action, is conceded by all fair minded people. Since the affairs of the government were placed in its keeping two years ago, it has been at work redeeming every pledge it made in its Chicago platform. The last legislation on the tariff question was some twelve years ago when the senate and house were in republican hands. For the past decade while the democrats were in the majority in the house of representatives not one important act of legislation found its way through that body. Every important measure looking to the relief of the people was strangled to death by that party. When it was found that both branches of the national government were placed in the republican hands, in 1888, the first act of the democracy was to make the assertion that no legislation should be allowed to find its way to the statute book. The pass word was "fillibuster." But they found the party of brains in charge and the "gogites" and the "grateful thanks of a long suffering people have gone out to Mr. Reed for the able manner in which he has carried out the demands of the people. The revolutionary tactics of the men who tried to disrupt the union in the recent past were brushed away like the cob webs of an evening's growth. The revolutionists in the campaign of that year pretended to favor the granting of pensions to the union soldier and pretended to favor tariff reduction, pretended to favor the increase of silver coinage. What have we seen? We have seen a united party of copperheads voting against the granting of pension; we have seen a united bourbon party vote solidly against the increase of silver coinage; we see a routed democratic organization doing all in its power to prevent the reduction of the tariff. That is now, that has ever been, the democratic party. Without principle, without honor, without courage, without the truthfulness of an aborigine, it still lives and hopes to gain favor from a long suffering people. That party which has robbed the treasuries of $2,400,000; that has promised everything and done nothing; that is without honor at home or abroad, is the party that desires and asks to be reinstated in public favor. History has long since fixed the status of the two parties. Thirty years is long enough for any people to ascertain whom to trust. If they could find on the blotched and darkened pages of democratic history one clear spot, one hopeful sign, they might forget its early record, but they can see no hope, no promise of the future. On the other hand they see in the republican party every hope and promise for the future. It performs the duties demanded by the people. The people know where it makes a promise it is not a shallow pretense, a fraud and a deception. They know it is a party of convictions, of courage, of action, and not a hungry set of office seekers and bootlickers. They recognize in it the same patriotism that characterized it in the dark and trying days of 1860, when it had Lincoln for its disciple and its guide, and rising generations will grow up to honor and respect it not only for what it has done, but for what it is now doing and will ever do so long as it exists in this nation of free men.

Republican Outlook.

Communicated:

The time is fast approaching when it will behoove the republican party to bring out their best men for county offices. The republican party is the dominant party of Cole county. All that is required is for the party to stand shoulder to shoulder in the coming campaign to have success perched on their banner. The great cry of the day is, among the democratic party, to have Gen. McIntyre brought out for the legislature.

They say, bring that gentleman out and the interest of the country will be subserved. Again they say, as the legislature will be undoubtedly democratic, that he can do more for the interest of the county than any other man. Now, we ask in all candor, cannot the republican party in this county find as good timber for representation as Mr. McIntyre to represent them in the next legislature. No republican will question this. And we ask, why should we, as republicans, be compelled to vote for a democrat when we can nominate a good republican in our midst with every assurance of success. Let the republican party of Cole county bring out one of its best men for that position, and we feel confident that Cole county will be represented by a republican. The Tribune has remarked in its columns that all the republican party wanted was to secure the legislature to oust Vest. The suggestion is a good one. Mr. Vest has served his time and day. It is about time that old blatherskite was retired, for, as far as he is concerned, he never did the State of Missouri any good and never will.

All we ask of the republican party is to bring out a good republican to beat Mr. McIntyre. As he will undoubtedly be the nominee of the democratic party for the position of representative.

Let us as republicans of this county, beat the gentleman. A little while on our part will carry the county for the republican party.
